

CAL U MANAGEMENT

Each semester California University surveys students that are preparing to graduate from the Business and Economics department. The results are reviewed annually as part of the strategic planning process, and used to drive meaningful improvements in department practices and processes. Here is a sample of what California University Management Majors had to say about their experience...

"How the professors took additional time to help a student in need. They actually wanted to help set the students up for success."

"I loved being able to learn together in the small class."

"The smaller sized classes made it easier to communicate with my professors."

"That I can take all of my courses online and work full time at the same time."

"I liked how the class sizes were small to average sizes and it was easier to connect with the professor and understand material better."

"I enjoyed the variety of classes that I was able to take, including business courses, languages, logic, and so forth."

"The ability to fix my schedule so it would perfectly fit my wants and needs. Getting a good learning experience."

"I liked that I could graduate within four years."

"I liked how I had the opportunity to take online and face-to-face classes."
